

In regard to relaxing the limits on the No Call List...When I cancel a service, such as a credit card, I do so after thoroughly weighing the pros and cons of the service and most often because I am no longer in need of the service or I am unhappy with it. Therefore I do not want to be constantly harassed for 18 months by a company I no longer wish to do business with. To relax the limitations is to consider my decision-making incompetent or ignorant. There comes a point when unwanted telemarketer calls becomes harassment and an infringement on my privacy. Please do everything in your power to uphold the current system (or even consider making it stronger). Thank you for your time.